between HERITAGE & HORIZONS

Dr. Paul A. Rader '56, President

*W*e are forever positioned between the heritage that lies behind us and the broad horizons stretching out before. This is especially true at Asbury College, where our rich history has brought us to an exciting time of looking forward at a wide range of opening opportunities. As we reflect in this issue of the Ambassador on the past year, we asked our president, Dr. Paul A. Rader '56, where Asbury College is and what it faces during the year to come.

What are Asbury College's strengths at this point in its history?

There are so many things that are remarkable about Asbury College: The place, the people, the programs, the palpable sense of the presence of God. We have such a gifted and committed faculty and staff. Our students are bright and eager to equip themselves for the unique and changing challenges of their time. We are daily conscious of the host of people who pray for the College and who support us in our mission.

As an independent Christ-centered liberal arts college in the Wesleyan Holiness tradition, we have a special niche to fill in Christian higher education. The Church needs Asbury College. The mission of Christ around the world needs Asbury College. Our culture needs the transformative influence of what makes this institution outstanding.

Again and again, Asbury College has been touched by the flame of revival that has swept across our campus and around the world. It's almost as if we can smell the smoke and sense beneath our feet the smoldering coals of revival fire. We live daily in prayerful expectation of fresh fire from the Throne.

I could talk in some detail about our flourishing media communication and teacher education programs, our science and humanities programs, our Christian ministries program, not to mention music and art and so many other areas. Our social work program recently completed a five-year process to secure accreditation from the Council on Social Work Education. This recognition will assist us in attracting greater numbers of new students to that area.

“Our students are bright and eager to equip themselves for the unique and changing challenges of their time.”

We are committed to excellence and we deliver on that promise. Asbury College is a growth environment for the young adults who study here. Immersed in this community they internalize standards and values, priorities and purposes that determine their futures.

Across the years, those futures have taken them into every imaginable arena of life, in America and around the world. They are salt and light and living seed. Asbury College thrives between its cherished heritage and the exciting horizons that draw us forward to the future God has in store for us.

What are the challenges the College faces now and in the year ahead?

The greatest challenge is positioning ourselves to adapt to the changing realities that lie before us. Currently we are into the recruiting cycle for the 2005-06, school year. Our admissions counselors are scattered around the country engaging students and telling the Asbury College story.

We are fortunate to have Dr. Jack Powell as part of our leadership team. As Vice President for Enrollment Management, he has already put into place more efficient and effective strategies for attracting new students. Jack has said repeatedly how blessed we are to have such a quality product in our College as we work at marketing it to those who can most benefit from their years here.

Trustee Kay Burrus '82 Hayden has been building relationships with our minority students and conducting a study to determine how we might best address the needs of this segment of

Taking the Initiative

Throughout the fall semester, the first group of students selected to receive grants from the Asbury College Initiative for Servant Leadership Internships for International Development have returned to campus to share about their experiences. The students received up to $10,000 each for various projects overseas, from working with Zambian orphans to establishing accounting systems for bookstores in the Ukraine.

Their opportunities were made possible through a program established with a $1 million gift to Asbury College in honor of Dr. Ernest '53 and Jeannie Sue Groce '54 Steury. Students were able to change their world — and see significant change in their own lives.

Julie Brown '04 taught English and American culture at Tanghu Middle School in China with the English Language Institute. “My summer was significant because of the relationships I built.” she shared. “My students and I developed relationships in and out of class. I saw how other teachers planted the seeds, and now I was part of the harvest.”

On the other side of the world, Catherine Bunge '06 traveled in rural Uganda, teaching community health classes with World Gospel Mission. Among other topics, she shared with children about the importance of hand-washing and with adults about water sanitation procedures.

“I found great joy in teaching and was able to see the effectiveness of the program through my home visits and talking with community health workers,” she said. “God began to show me the variety of tasks involved with community health and how my gifts and abilities fit into the program in so many different ways.

“Jesus did a lot in and through me this summer, and the Asbury Initiative grant made it possible.”

Currently, a new group of students are applying for grants to engage in servant leadership around the world, embarking on what will become a valuable part of the Asbury College experience for years to come.

our student body. With her help, we will develop targeted resources that would allow us to recruit more African-American, Asian, Latin-American and Native-American students, as well as more students from abroad. Their presence on our campus is a statement of Kingdom authenticity. Diversity is still a challenge. It is a promise we have not yet kept, but we are making progress.

We are excited about the Asbury Initiative (funded by Stephen and Phyllis McRoberts '53 West) and the Student Impact Grants (funded as part of the Lilly Transformations Project) that have scattered our students across the world in life-changing opportunities for servant-leadership training and experience. We covet a cross-cultural learning or serving experience for every Asburian. We want them to be ready to participate redemptively in our increasingly globalized world.

As you indicated, we live in a rapidly changing world. Over the past 114 years, Asbury College has made changes to meet students' needs. What is your perspective on how the College relates to the current generation of students?

To begin, the things that are vitally essential to who we are as an institution are not changing. We value our holiness heritage. 'Holiness Unto the Lord' is not just prominently displayed in Hughes Auditorium as we gather to worship in that sacred setting. It is emblazoned on the life and work of this community of faith and learning. We want it to be the passion of every student.

“We want chapel programs to engage students as never before.”

Our task is to enable our students both to cherish our heritage and to be prepared to encounter the challenges of the future. They will live out their love and loyalty to the Lord Christ in an ever more complex, changing and globalized world. To prepare them, we must be adaptive to the changing needs and reasonable expectations of our students. Those expectations include maintaining the sophistication of our information technologies, for example.

In our chapel programming we are making the best use ever of the incredible creative resources we have in our community. We want chapel services to engage students as never before.

Above all, we want the programming to be a vehicle through which the Holy Spirit can transact business in the hearts of students. We want worship to be genuine. We want the music to be quality. We want the message to be clear and compelling. And we want the visual and dramatic segments to enhance the clarity and appeal of the message.

At the same time, we want our students to appreciate our great hymnodic heritage and for our musical ensembles to have ample opportunity to enrich our worship. The long altar is still at the center of our worship life. So far, we have been thrilled to see how God has worked through our chapel experiences this fall.

Whatever changes may occur in our community life, we are committed to maintaining standards that honor the Lord and are faithful to His Word.

The Asbury College community grew four years ago to include a new graduate program. Where is the program now, and where do you see it going?

Our graduate programs are flourishing under the energetic leadership of Dr. Bonnie Banker. After four years, this program has become self-sufficient and is providing income to Asbury College. It serves more than 60 adult students from nearly 20 counties in their attempt to continue their education. We offer masters degrees in education for special education, instructional media and English as a second language. Full of potential, degrees are available with alternative certification in special education and several content areas of secondary education.

The Graduate Education Program at Asbury College trains today's educators to be facilitators of student success and professional community throughout the region. This is a natural development of our mission. It is addressing the needs of our students and enhancing the quality of education in our state. In addition, it is looking toward the horizon, anticipating what will be needed to remain competitive and continue to grow in today's market.

What are the financial needs of the College in the next year?

We depend on the faithful, generous and sacrificial giving of our alumni and friends, who year after year enable us to provide our students with a quality education. These people and organizations are recognized in the latter pages of this issue of the Ambassador. Currently, 21.3 percent of our alumni give to the College. Many benefits to Asbury College students could be realized by seeing more of our alumni financially involved in their future.

“We depend on the faithful, generous and sacrificial giving of our alumni and friends.”

The current generation of Asburians is helped most directly through giving to the Fund for Asbury College. This unrestricted fund provides for the difference between tuition income and operating expenses, and a substantial portion also serves to subsidize scholarships for students in need. Over the course of the past decade, giving to this fund has grown somewhat. However, costs have increased at a more rapid rate. Increased giving in this area will enable us to face those rising costs.

Beyond the Fund for Asbury College, giving to scholarships is a significant way to help our students. Some of our alumni and friends choose to make annual scholarship gifts. Others establish endowed scholarships that can continue giving in perpetuity. Whichever path they take, they help to make it possible for a wider circle of people to gain the advantage of an Asbury College education.

Our campus has a rich heritage in its architecture, from the Hager Administration Building to Hughes Auditorium. In addition, students benefit from modern facilities such as the Luce Physical Activities Center, Aldersgate Commons apartment complex and the Kinlaw Library. Recent renovations have helped to improve the Hamann-Ray Science Center and Kresge Hall. Yet many of our facilities require further renovations to meet the high standards our students deserve. New building projects remain on the drawing boards awaiting funding. In all, we face approximately $50 million in necessary renovations and new construction in the coming years.

A Fresh Look at Chapel

This fall, Asbury College has taken a fresh look at chapel programming in an effort to continue to provide relevant, challenging worship for the campus community.

In early August, President Paul Rader appointed Stuart Smith '77 as campus chaplain in connection with his responsibilities as associate dean for student ministries. As campus chaplain, Rev. Smith assumes responsibility for chapel.

The chapel advisory committee, under his chairmanship, will continue to suggest speakers and subjects to be addressed in the programming of chapel. As before, the committee is advisory in nature.

Dr. Jon Roller '83, instructor of music, became chapel music coordinator and leader of a creative worship arts team. That team will work closely with Rev. Smith to determine the style and worship content of all chapel programs. Two students serve on the creative worship arts team and help to strengthen student participation in chapel. The team explores a wide range of contemporary Christian music, multimedia presentations and drama. Traditional hymns and liturgical elements are also included, and chapel remains a premier forum for the College's performing ensembles.

The schedule of speakers continues to draw challenging, noteworthy men and women from around the world. This fall, Dr. Stan Cosby of First Church, a United Methodist Congregation in Oklahoma City, spoke for fall revival services. Other recent speakers have included Adam and Rebecca Vincent of Free Methodist World Missions; Dr. Jeff Greenway, president of Asbury Theological Seminary; Dr. David Hager '68, physician and member of our own board of trustees; a number of faculty members; and students who participated in summer ministry trips.

A task force composed of faculty, student and administrative representatives is evaluating the changes to chapel programming and will be presenting ongoing recommendations to Rev. Smith; Dr. Rader; Dr. Ray Whiteman, provost; and the faculty assembly.

Though instruments and music styles change, all involved in chapel strive to hold Asbury College close to its vital theological heritage and to make that heritage come alive for a new generation of Asburians.

Lastly, a great demand can be removed from annual budgets and the Fund for Asbury College as our endowment grows. Income from our endowment supports scholarships and provides for the daily operations of the College. A larger endowment would enable us to continue to provide quality programming for our students with less dependence on tuition income.

The prayer support of graduates of Asbury College continues around the clock. As it's said, the sun never sets on Asburians. As our alumni serve in such a broad range of vocations, how is the College recognizing their achievements?

We have a remarkable alumni program, directed by Carolyn Ridley '81. The Alumni Board is made up of gifted and accomplished men and women who are committed, enthusiastic and involved. Our reunion events are the envy of many peer institutions, involving more than 900 participants.

Alumni are indispensable partners in helping us to fulfill the mission of the College for this and future generations. Many of our students are directly influenced by alumni to enroll in Asbury College. The generous financial support of our alumni to our annual operating budget and to our endowment through scholarships is critical to maintaining the quality of education that we offer.

This summer, we recognized several distinguished alumni for their achievements. Those recognized with the "A" Award join a long line of recipients in a tradition dating to 1946. This year, the College honored Ellsworth Culver '49, senior vice president and co-founder of Mercy Corps; Virginia Gilmore '54 Durgin, former associate deputy director of the Office of Finance and Logistics of the CIA; Roy Lauter '64, associate professor of education at Asbury College; and Ruth Ann Shepherd '74, founder and head of the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit at the Pikeville (Kentucky) Methodist Hospital. Daniel Groves '91, senior advisor for Kentucky Governor Ernie Fletcher, received the Distinguished Young Alum Award.

Alumni have the opportunity—and in the end, the responsibility—of guaranteeing that Asbury College will be able to provide for this and future generations the same heritage of “Academic Excellence and Spiritual Vitality” that helped to shape their lives. They can reach to the horizon and beyond through the lives of the gifted and committed students God entrusts to us. No investment pays richer returns.

We are entering the second year of implementation of the Transformations Project, which was funded by a $2 million grant from the Lilly Endowment Inc. How has that program had an impact on the College?

A rich variety of programs on vocation has been launched under the Lilly Transformations Project and is ongoing. A new series of Student Impact Grants is being awarded, encouraging our students to dream big and have those dreams funded. They are students like Ben Lindle '05, who has founded a choir of Hispanic children in Lexington and used a grant to take the choir on tour.

While waiting for his assignment on a relief crew, Brandon Bray '06 struck up a conversation with his manager that led to an open dialogue about everything from science to relationships to faith. That conversation led to his working as a camera operator at three events. “I think that 20 years from now, if I'm doing what I think the Lord has called me to do, I will look back and say, ‘That was the beginning,’” he reflected.

Sarah Seaton '05 also had an opportunity to show her coworkers the strengths of Asbury College's program. “I was actually surprised at how much I already knew,” she said. “The first day I was in the edit suite, the producer and editor were trying to tell me what they were doing. I finished their sentences for them. They were surprised at how much a college student knew about their business.”

Faculty persons are receiving grants for scholarly projects and course enhancement. The Women in Leadership and Ministry programs are providing opportunities for interaction, mentoring and conferences. Three of our students recently attended a conference in England as part of that focus.

This summer, we hosted a diverse group of teenagers on our campus and on our ropes challenge course for the first Summer Youth Leadership Institute, which has introduced students who may not otherwise have entered Wilmore to the opportunities at Asbury College.

The President's Senior Honors Seminar on “Living Lives of Significance” is a Lilly program, in which I have been given the privilege of sharing in the lives of some of our top students. These are only representative of the programs that are touching literally every area of campus life.

Asbury College continues opportunities to send students into unique learning opportunities off campus. This summer, the College gained national recognition for participating in the broadcast of its sixth Olympics. What was the outcome of that experience?

For the 53 students and staff who were privileged to be a part of our team it was the chance of a lifetime. Participating in the broadcast of a world class event, interacting with top professionals in the field, gaining hands-on experience with the most sophisticated equipment and relating to people from around the globe is an unbelievably enriching experience for our students. There were opportunities for personal witness, though most often through the living out of their faith in an often intense work environment.

“Asbury College has a rich heritage of preparing students to change their world.”

The Communication Arts Department continues to draw large numbers of students to Asbury College as the work of Asburians builds a global reputation. They have overflowed Corbett Hall as they seek opportunities no other institution can provide: Asburians were the only students outside of Greece invited to work for the Athens Olympic Broadcasting Company. Dr. Jim Owens '79 is working now to secure Asbury College's participation in the 2006 Winter Olympics in Italy and the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing. The opportunities are invaluable to our students and, indeed, our College as a whole.

The programs provided by the Communication Arts Department are just a sampling of the many opportunities for our students have to enhance the traditional classroom learning environment. Such opportunities are present, in a variety of forms, in nearly every department on campus.

How would you sum up the prospects of the years to come for Asbury College?

Asbury College has a rich heritage of preparing students to change their world, and that heritage will continue. To do so, however, will require the support—in prayers, service and financial giving—of all those who look to Asbury College's bright horizons with excitement and anticipation. 🌱

Challenging the World

During the month of August, 5,000 miles from their classrooms in Wilmore, 53 Asbury College media communication students and professors worked in broadcasting at the Olympic Games in Athens, Greece. This is the sixth time the College has been involved in the broadcast of the Games.

Most of the juniors, seniors, and recent graduates worked in the International Broadcast Center during the Games, serving as camera assistants and loggers for Athens Olympic Broadcasting (AOB) and Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC).

Their role was much larger than their official job descriptions. Students overcame obstacles, engaged a very different culture, shared Christ's love with coworkers and grew in ways they never expected.

And Asbury College hadn't just prepared her to edit video. “One day, two of my producers sat and asked me questions about my faith for 45 minutes,” she said. “For the remainder of the Olympics, they continued to ask me questions about why I believed what I believed. I not only was challenged to live out my faith, but I felt like I challenged them to rethink what they valued most in life.”

Plans are coming together for Asburians to help broadcast the next two Olympics in 2006 and 2008. ■

CELEBRATING OUR GIFTS

Rev. Robert T. Bridges '69
Vice President for Institutional Advancement

*H*eritage and Horizons. The past and the future. That is always the issue, isn't it? We are all products of our past—where we have been, what we have experienced, our genetic history and the past circumstances that form us. Asbury College has a rich heritage of being a staging ground for the future. But we must never forget that horizons are more important than heritage. I am absolutely convinced that God is not as impressed with our past faithfulness as he is with our present and future faithfulness. The past prepares us for what God has us to do today and tomorrow. Society has always needed what Asbury College provides. But the world and society need Asbury College more today than it ever has.

The true character of Asbury College is the composite character of the faculty. But faculty alone will not move us toward the horizon of God's call on this school. Each of us has a vital role. The selection of students is important. The hiring of quality staff is essential. And just as important are the donors, alumni and friends of Asbury College. For if it were not for the support coming from the College's friends, achieving greatness as a college, doing God's will, and reaching toward the horizons of new and exciting service to the Kingdom is impossible.

I am forever encouraged by the words of Jesus: "Don't lay up for yourselves treasures on Earth, where moth and rust consume and where thieves break in and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust consumes and where thieves do not break in and steal. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

On the following pages you will read three stories about some of our friends. Dr. J. Ellsworth and Janet Kalas tell why they financially support Asbury College when there is no "natural" reason to do so. They are not alumni nor do they have family who are alumni. But, in a more realistic sense, they are Asburians the same as those of us who graduated here. They believe in Asbury College and have put their heart and treasure here.

Tom and Kay Morrill set up a scholarship for math majors, a group seldom represented with an abundance of scholarship support. It is their hope that some of Asbury College's students can go beyond the traditional kinds of ministry and impact the workforce for the cause of Christ. Changing society—that is what Asbury College is all about.

Brandon '82 and Melanie Johnson and Paul '83 and Sandra Tennant '82 Stroebel wanted to show their appreciation for Dr. Alan Moulton '60 and Dr. Ed Blue, past and present faculty members. It is a story, however, of reconnection with Asbury College, helping current students and giving back in appreciation for what was received.

These are just a few of the many stories we could tell. Our heritage is full of stories like these—of friends who not only love this school and its past but also see that God has even brighter horizons ahead. It is all about accepting new challenges and moving on to even greater things. It's about putting your treasure where your heart is.

The needs are significant, but God's resources are endless! There is the ever important Fund for Asbury College which must be expanded to meet new horizons. Scholarship and financial aid are essential if we are to attract outstanding students and make Asbury College affordable for the ones God has called here. New programs await that must be funded the same as "venture capital" is poured into new business opportunities. New buildings need to be built for expanding programs like media communication, and other facilities need improvements, like the Hamman-Ray Science Center. It is only through the generosity of our alumni and friends that these things are possible for Asbury College.

Horizons always move ahead of us. You can see it, you can move to where you think it is, but it is always "out there" just a little farther. Just as God never lets us rest on past achievements, as great as they may be, He always has something else for us to accomplish—a new challenge, another opportunity, a distant horizon to reach.

As you will see on the following pages, many of our alumni and friends see beyond what Asbury College is, knowing what it can be. Thank you for your support of Asbury College. Join with us as we celebrate our gifts and pray for even more on the horizon.

Moving Campus Forward

Many improvements to Asbury College's campus have been completed or are in process to provide a better experience for our students.

Significant exterior work on Hamann-Ray Science Center is scheduled to finish in December 2004. New brickwork, windows, front doors and insulation repair damaging leaks and structural problems with the aging original facade. The work adds architectural interest to the building and ties its appearance to historic buildings across campus. As the exterior work is completed, much work still remains to improve the interior of the facility, most notably adding a central air conditioning system.

As their senior class gift, the Abiding Class of 2002 built a new pavilion near the city reservoir and the new physical plant facility. The pavilion will become a home for many class events and bonfires. Picnic tables and a grill will be added soon to complete the facility.

Since its construction in 1910, Wesley Hall had served as a dormitory for many Asburians. Most recently, it housed the offices of the campus newspaper, yearbook and tutoring center. However, the age, design and condition of the building made it unfeasible to continue to maintain that facility. The offices in the building were relocated, and Wesley Hall was demolished this summer, opening up an expansive view across Reasoner Green.

In the near future, the brick house at 101 North Lexington Avenue will be renovated to include editing suites and other elements of the media communication program. Current facilities in Corbett Hall and Bethel Studios are unable to house the number of students who want to take advantage of the opportunities this program provides. The program's classes are scattered across campus, and students are often on waiting lists to use space in the facility. The addition of 101 North Lexington will help as a new Communication Arts Center awaits funding.

Many other projects round out the $50 million of needed renovations and construction across campus. One will involve renovations to Kresge Hall during the summer of 2005. Another will transform the former Morrison-Kenyon Library into a useful and attractive student center that will reinvigorate the heart of campus. A third will and make major updates to the McCreless Fine Arts Center. Asbury College continues to make improvements as funds are available, striving to keep the campus up-to-date, safe and attractive for students.

an ETERNAL investment

J. Ellsworth and Janet Kalas

Dr. Ellsworth Kalas is dean of the Beeson International Center for Biblical Preaching and Church Leadership at Asbury Theological Seminary. A pastor for nearly four decades, he was among the founding faculty of the Beeson Center in 1993. Neither he nor his wife, Janet, is a graduate of Asbury College. None of their children came here. They have no family members who are alumni. Yet they have given generously to Asbury College since 1990. At the President's Society dinner in April, Dr. Kalas shared why he and his wife have invested in Asbury College and why they continue to do so.

In a sense, it's a long story, because it begins when I was 10 years old. The fall and winter of that year, four life-shaping things happened to me. First, I gave my life to our Lord Christ. Next, I recognized my call to the ministry. Third, I began reading my Bible through from beginning to end. And fourth, I learned all that really matters to me about financial investment.

I had a Sunday school teacher named Hulda Weintz. I dedicated a book to her several years ago, even though she had been dead for 50 years before the book came out. I owed her that book, and a great deal more. I owed it for several reasons, but especially because, shortly after I was saved, she taught me to tithe. She said that as a Christian I must give at least a tenth of my income to God. My heart was young and tender; I needed no more convincing than her earnest instruction.

Years later I took Economics 101 at the University of Wisconsin, and I sometimes read business publications, but as far as I'm concerned Miss Weintz gave me the most important financial counsel I have ever received. As a result of her advice, I now have investments—eternal investments—in churches, schools, hospitals, homes for the aging and a variety of publishing and evangelistic enterprises all over the world.

But one thing Miss Weintz didn't tell me: where it would be best to make these investments. Mind you, it wasn't a big issue at the time. I recall vividly my first contribution from my tithes; it was 17 cents, and I was many weeks in accumulating this tenth of my income, so that I could proudly drop it in the offering plate one Sunday.

As the years went by, however, I learned that there was an issue not simply of giving to the work of God, but deciding where that giving should be directed. So many places are deserving. Obviously one's local church should get a consistent share, because that's the place where our souls are related to the faith. And missions; how can one claim to be Christian without sending money to missions? And homes for the aging, of course, and the needs of the poor; the Bible makes clear that God has a prejudice in favor of the poor.

Which is to say, there is almost no limit to the places where one can invest for God. And each of us has to decide where that investment will be.

Mind you, it is an investment. It's an eternal investment. This is the only chance you and I have to put our money someplace where it will be worth anything after they bury us. It's nice to know you and I can do something eternal with something as transient as money.

Janet and I choose to give a good piece of our eternal investment to this college, because we believe that the greatest power entrusted to us humans is the power of the mind. Say anything you will about the powers and forces that exist in our world; they begin in the human mind. Military power? It begins in the mind. Movies, television, books, newspapers? They begin in the mind. Business and science? They begin in the mind. Computers, with all their fascinating power? They begin in the mind. The mind is the most powerful force God has entrusted to us human beings.

But the mind is neither good nor bad. Adam and Eve demonstrated as much in Eden. The tempter appealed to their minds, and with their minds they chose to do evil. So it is that we humans can use our minds in terrifying, destructive ways, or in ways that are wonderfully redemptive.

So someone, somewhere, has to work for the redemption of the mind. It isn't enough that our souls are saved; we need to be sure that the mind is turned toward God and God's will. No wonder, then, that John Wesley, founder of the Methodist movement, working with extremely limited resources, chose to put some of those scarce resources into establishing a school. And no wonder that our ancestors felt, as they moved into America's frontiers, that they must have Christian schools. They knew they must redeem the mind. They didn't want, on the one hand, for the mind to be poor intellectual mush, or on the other, to become arrogant and self-centered, to the destruction of others and of itself.

The redemption of our world depends so much on the redemption of the human mind. We need redeemed minds, to get redeemed politics, redeemed business, redeemed entertainment and redeemed family life. And it starts with the mind, the human mind.

That's why we believe in Asbury College. We know that it is operated by people with redeemed minds, and that its professors want nothing more than that they should send out graduates whose minds have been transformed—both in the classroom and in the continuing, redemptive power of Jesus Christ in daily living. We know of no college that does this better than Asbury College.

That's why Janet and I give faithfully and significantly to Asbury College. We think it is a prime investment in God's purposes and in eternity. 🌱

“There is almost no limit to the places where one can invest for God.”

Investing in Hidden Assets

What Tim Morrill found in Asbury College's Mathematics and Computer Science Department impressed him and his parents, Tom and Kay. Tim, now a junior, is one of the first students to pursue the new financial mathematics major, an interdisciplinary program in connection with the Business and Economics Department.

“We feel that the math department is very strong,” said Kay. “It's an asset the College has that few people might realize.” She and her husband decided to recognize that strength and help to fill a financial need they saw among some of their son's classmates.

“We believe there is a need to be in ministry in the workforce,” Tom explained. “I can't remember a time when integrity in the financial business was more needed than today. Students who not only have the ethics but also proclaim their faith are a huge boon for Asbury College.”

The Morrills have given four annual scholarships, one for a math major in each year of study. In addition, they make an annual gift to benefit all students in the department through a variety of activities. Tim said that he hopes to contribute to his family's legacy after he graduates, an example his father hopes will take root with others.

“We'd like to see graduates help students coming behind them,” Tom said. “These disciplines tend to be higher-paying jobs, so people in them have a responsibility to be good stewards.”

Appreciating It More

For Brandon Johnson '82, his alma mater was something that improved with time.

“I appreciated Asbury College when I went there,” he said. “But the further I went out after graduating, the more I appreciated it.”

In particular, two professors stood out for their influence in his life: Dr. Alan Moulton '60 and Dr. Edwin Blue. “It was academics,” he related, “but it was so much more than that.”

Brandon and a group of friends, including Paul Stroebel '83, met in the Moulton's home for a Bible study each Tuesday during their college career. Years after graduation, he said the spiritual foundation and the friendships he formed at the College helped him to return to his faith after a time of wandering. “In that return, I learned just how important those friendships were to me,” he said.

Eventually, he formed a law practice in West Virginia with Paul, and they—along with their wives, Melanie Johnson and Sandra Tennant '82 Stroebel—decided to honor their mentors by giving scholarships to Asbury College for a new generation of students.

The scholarship fund will provide aid to history, biology, education or psychology majors from a one-time gift.

“We wanted to give back,” Brandon said. “More and more, I appreciate the importance of Christian education. It has to be relevant to students, and if it is, it's going to impact the rest of their lives.”
